

A Hilarious Fall: The Christmas Morning Mishap

Logan Andrews

"What is going on?" I hollered! I was dizzy from the fumes of adhesive and construction in the city. Christmas was near and the season was changing. I quickly hopped out of bed to loud banging and I ran to the stairs leading down off of the second floor I was almost at the second step down towards the landing when I slipped and began to fall. "Ouch!" and "Darn!" I stubbed my middle toe. I twisted my ankle and I fell down more than halfway down fifteen steps! I hit my head and I broke my fall with my arm. "Ouch, that really hurt!" I thought to myself. I had to regain my head and balance the impacts were electric and shocking. I was so interested in seeing the construction and what was causing the noise I fell down and I was injured. It was really funny I was wearing bed trousers and a bathrobe to cover up from the cold weather I left on a hamper next to my bed also carpet slippers. I wanted to cry although I was still in One piece. I went to the neighbors house to ask if they had heard what had happened and they said "Yes!" they were concerned. I told them I had fell and It was loud and embarrassing they replied "I know I heard a loud noise and someone holler 'OUCH!'" I told them It was me and we Laughed together. I was more carefull after that!

"What is going on?" I hollered! I was dizzy from the fumes of adhesive and the ongoing construction in the city. Christmas was near, and the season was changing. I quickly hopped out of bed to the sound of loud banging. Rushing to the stairs leading down from the second floor, I was almost at the second step when I slipped and began to fall.

"Ouch!" and "Darn!" I stubbed my middle toe, twisted my ankle, and tumbled more than halfway down the fifteen steps! I hit my head and broke my fall with my arm. "Ouch, that really hurt!" I thought to myself. I had to regain my composure and balance as the impacts were electric and shocking.

I was so curious about the construction noise that I had ignored my own safety, leading to this hilarious accident. To make it even funnier, I was dressed in bed trousers, a bathrobe I'd left on a hamper next to my bed, and carpet slippers—hardly an outfit for a dramatic fall!

Though I wanted to cry from the pain, I was still in one piece. Determined to figure out the source of the noise, I headed to my neighbor's house to ask if they'd heard what had happened.

"Yes!" they said, concerned. I sheepishly explained that I had fallen down the stairs. Their response? "I know! I heard a loud noise and someone holler 'OUCH!'"

I confessed that it was me, and we ended up laughing together. It was embarrassing, but also a moment to remember. After that, I made sure to be much more careful!
